

"GIVE ME THE LIBERTY TO KNOW, TO UTTER, AND TO ARGUE FREELY, ACCORDING TO CONSCIENCE, ABOVE ALL OTHER LIBERTY."

NEWMARKET, C. W., FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1862.

WHOLE-NO. 481

After the transaction of cattle festival

The Council adjourned till to-morrow—Leader.

The Liverpool Post, of the 19th inst., says: "It is rumored that General Sir A. M. Tulloch has been appointed to a high military command in Canada."

The three members of the Government upon the Militia Commission are Hon. Messrs. Cartier, Macdonald and Balch.

We see it stated that the Rev. Wm. Brewster, M.P.P., for Brant, is to receive a salary of $1,000 per annum. We will fill that his physicians may be well be paid to take him seat in the House.

The English revenue cutter, Hedon, has run down lately at Kingston.

THE MASTER OF GUELPH.—It is announced, says the St. Catharines Freeman, that Mr. J. C. Macdonald, the member for Niagara, Mr. Phillips is about to resign his seat in Parliament to make room for Mr. J. G. Macdonald. It was once supposed that Messrs. Phillips and Macdonald were to be elected in A. Wood's ward, but he has been appointed to the vacant office of Postmaster at St. Catharines. But it now appears that Mr. Phillips will receive the appointment.

the royal family the words "Albert Prince of Wales" were inserted in place of the words "Albert Prince of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha." And her Majesty did strictly and command, that no edition of the Common Prayer be from henceforth printed but with this amendment.

- As an attempt to impose upon the authorities here had been promptly and defeated. Two thousand medals were wanted for the troops, and the coinage was pending, nothing was bought up all the way to the front for the purpose, and held in store in advance. The War Department had at once to substitute banknotes for medals, and the contract for the purpose was about the fourth of the month of August.

LECTURE ON EDUCATION.

[The following Lecture on Education was delivered by Mr. Thomas Mann, Local Superintendent of Schools for this Village, on Tuesday evening of last week. Its perusal will repay every one interested in the subject of education.]

No country in Europe has enjoyed such a reputation for the excellence of its schools as Prussia, but because the school system of that country has been sustained by arbitrary power many have been found to condemn it.

The Hon. Horace Mann, the Secretary of the Board of Education in Massachusetts in 1843 took a tour through Prussia and justly remarks—"Allowing all the charges made against the Prussian system to be true, there were two reasons why I was not deterred from examining it. In the first place the evils imputed to it were easily and naturally separable from the good which it was not denied to possess. If the Prussian school master has better methods of teaching reading, writing, grammar, geography, arithmetic, &c., so that in half the time he produces greater and better results, surely we may copy his modes of teaching these elements without adopting his notions of passive obedience to government or blind adherence to the articles of a church." "In the second place, if Prussia can pervade the benign influence of education to the support of arbitrary power, we surely can employ them for the support and perpetuation of republican institutions. A national spirit of liberty can more easily be cultivated than a national spirit of bondage, and if it may be made one of the great prerogatives of education to perform the natural and unholy work of making slaves then surely it must be one of the noblest of instrumentalities for rearing a nation of freemen."

In speaking of the teachers of Prussia, Mr. Mann observes—"After some opportunity for the observation of public men I do not hesitate to say, that if those teachers were brought together in one body, I believe they would form a dignified, intelligent, benevolent looking company of men as could be collected from the same amount of population in any country. They were alive free from arrogant pretension and from the affectation of humility. Their character was scattered over the whole country, moulding the character of its people and carrying them forward in a career of civilization more rapidly than any other people in the world were now advancing. This is a question," says Mr. Mann, "that can only be answered by giving an account of the seminaries for teachers."

Let us look for a moment at the guards and securities which Prussia carries in the sacred calling of teacher. In the first place, the teacher's profession holds such a high rank in the public estimation that none who have failed in other employments or departments of business are encouraged to look upon school keeping as an ultimate resource. Those, too, who from any cause despair of success in other departments of business or walks of life have very slender prospects in looking forward to this. These considerations exclude at once all that inferior order of men who, in some countries, constitute the main body of teachers."

Then come those preliminary schools where those who wish eventually to be common teachers, go in order to have their natural qualities and adaptation for school keeping tested; for it must be borne in mind that a man may have the most unexceptionable character, may be capable of mastering all the branches of study, may even be able to make the most brilliant career from day to day, and yet from some coldness or repulsiveness of manner, from harshness of voice, from some natural defect in his person, or in one of his senses, he may be adjudged an unsuitable model or archetype for children to be conformed to, or to grow by; and hence he may be dismissed at the end of his probationary term of six months.

You will observe therefore that before the pupils of the Normal Schools, scattered throughout the country, are permitted to enter, they must either have entered a preparatory school of training, (even before they have begun a regular course of Normal training) or else they must have studied in the common schools, under the tuition of able teachers, the following subjects:

Readiness in thinking the German language, including orthography and composition; history, description of the earth, knowledge of nature, drawing, knowledge of the bible, mental arithmetic, singing, readiness or facility in speaking.

In the training school for teachers, the first two or three years, the expend mainly in reviewing and expanding their elementary knowledge. The German language is studied in its relation to rhetoric and logic, and metaphysical literature; arithmetic is carried out into algebra and mixed mathematics; geography is carried out into perspective and machine drawing, and the drawing from models of all kinds and from objects in nature, &c.

The theory and practice not only of vocal, but of instrumental music, occupy much time. Every pupil must play on the violin, and some on other instruments. A thorough course of reading on the subject of education is undertaken, as well as a more general course. Bible history is almost common to memory. Connected with all the seminaries for teachers are large model or experimental schools, of the course much is spent in these, and look on tion rest upon him, that the most precious hopes of society are committed to his charge, and that on him depends, to a great extent, the temporal and perhaps the future well-being of hundreds of his fellow creatures. These are the considerations, the ideas, the feelings, amid which the candidate for teaching spends his probationary years. This is the daily atmosphere he breathes. These are the sacred, elevating, invigorating influences constantly pouring in upon his soul.

With such a training for every teacher, for none are permitted to teach in a public school without having undergone this thorough training, with such a training, I say, it is to be wondered that the Prussian schools are regarded as the best in the world?

Passing from Prussia into Austria we find a thorough system of Normal School training, so early as the year 1771. Under the Empress Theresa, Normal Schools were established for the training of teachers, and at the present day no one is permitted to teach a public school unless he has gone through a course of Normal School training.

Thus far we have pursued our subject through countries that are governed by arbitrary power—the will of the Sovereign being in a certain sense the law of the land—educational enactments made in some of them, which, to us free born Canadians, would savour very much of servitude and slavery.

We would disclaim our notions of freedom the right of government to compel us to send our children to school;—turn we now in the further investigation of the history of education to one of the freest countries in the world, at the same time to one of the smallest, having a population less than that of the capital of England, but whose bosoms have always throbbled with the great and glorious principles of liberty, a country land-locked on all sides by towering Alps, surrounded by perpetual snows, but whose hearts are warm with responsive sentiments of freedom—a country also in comparison with other European countries poorer than the poorest.

Liberty-loving Switzerland does not forget that the idea for which her Tels is fought is only to be fastened, cherished, and maintained by instilling into the minds of her youth those glorious principles which have made her free.

The most democratic form of government here exist and yet with but a very few exceptions (and that only in place where the population is so sparse that it is not found possible) school houses are erected throughout all the cantons into which the country is divided. Education is compulsory. The parents and guardians are required by Law to send their children to school from the ages of 6 to 14, and in some of the cantons to the age of 16—those who do not send are fined.

Switzerland can boast of thirteen Normal Schools for the instruction and training of the teachers.

As the great Napoleon has opened the way from France across the Alps, we will take the back track from Switzerland to that country.

Dr. Barnard, Superintendent of Common Schools in Connecticut, says—"There is nothing in the history of modern civilization more truly sublime than the establishment of the present law of primary instruction in France."

As has been justly remarked by an English writer—"Few nations ever suffered more bitter humiliation than the Prussians, and French inflicted on each other during the latter years of the present century; and it was supposed that feelings of cooperation, and national sympathy thus engendered by the force of circumstances, were ready, on the match being applied, to burst forth in terrible explosion. At the very time, however, when the elements of mischief were believed to be most active in the breasts of a people, jealous of their honour, and particularly sensitive to insult—at such a time the French Ministry, with the concurrence of the King and Chambers, sent one of their ablest and wisest citizens, not to hurl defiance, or demand restitution, but to take lessons in the art of training youth to knowledge and virtue, and that too in the capital of the very nation whose troops 16 years before had, on a less peaceful mission, bivouacked in the streets of Paris and planted their victorious cannon at the passages of her bridges.
